

Peter Janson – getting to here

A New Collection Of Solo Jazz Guitar Music
For Worldwide Release Via Eastern Woods Music Records

Peter Janson
getting to here

Eastern Woods Music Records has recently released an album by American guitarist Peter Janson, titled "Getting To Here". This album features both original compositions and arrangements of songs by renowned jazz composers such as Jerome Kern, Antonio Carlos Jobim, and Chick Corea. Janson's unique fusion of jazz, folk, and acoustic-instrumental styles is showcased in this solo jazz guitar album, played with artistry, technical mastery, and passion. Janson has been performing as a solo guitarist since 1999, releasing nine albums and performing in venues ranging from small clubs to large festivals and concert halls including the Montreal Jazz Festival and Carnegie Hall. His music has been featured in video games, commercials, and news documentaries, and has charted on Billboard's top 10 as a session guitarist.

Recorded in Nashville, "Getting To Here" is a six-track album that takes the listener on an introspective and soulful musical journey. It includes Janson's original compositions "I Should Have Just Waved Hello" and "Blues for Joe" (a tribute to Joe Pass), as well as unique interpretations of jazz standards "All the Things You Are", "Dindi" and "Spain". The album also features a stunning cover of the obscure yet guitar cult favorite "Lamentos do Morro" by Garoto. As one of the few national touring guitarists dedicated exclusively to performing solo jazz guitar, Janson is strongly influenced by the solo playing of guitarists like Joe Pass, Earl Klugh, Lionel Loueke, and Julian Lage. His music is engaging, knowledgeable, and rewarding for audiences who love jazz or simply great guitar music.

Currently, hot tracks are tk-5 "I Should Have Just Waved Hello" and tk-1 "All the Things You Are"
